

Dear Prospective XBRL Australia Member,

The support from XBRL Australia membership subscription fees over the past year, along with grant assistance from NOIE, has helped us achieve all of our milestones to date, including:

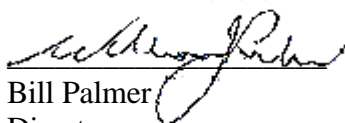

- Adoption of XBRL as the content standard for the Australian Tax Office;
- Continued use of XBRL by APRA;
- Planned inclusion of XBRL as the data format for the ASX's new corporate announcements platform;
- Continued good press in the mainstream media about XBRL and its future;
- Planned inclusion of XBRL functionality in accounting and desktop software;
- Awareness of XBRL and serious consideration of it by at least one major bank;
- Participation internationally at the International Steering Committee and conferences; in the development of IFRS taxonomies, the 2.1 Specification and the FRTA document.

Why take out XBRL Australia membership?

- XBRL is here to stay and at the moment there is no other way to stay up to speed with what's happening in the XBRL world.
- Adoption is happening now and implementation is next. Right now, the only place you can get the requisite skills to undertake this, or to assess those who propose to undertake it for you, is as part of the consortium.
- This is new and there is no track record for the vast majority in this type of work. Membership of the XBRL consortium provides some level of credibility to the marketplace.
- You will have access to XBRL specialists and experts around the world, who are either implementing XBRL or developing products and materials that may assist you.
- The transition to IFRS is upon us, and XBRL can help smooth the way. The information and advice referred to above will show you how.
- You can continue to use your demonstration of support for XBRL to market your leadership and visionary culture, or at the very least your support for transparent business reporting.
- XBRL Australia members have access to free education workshops and seminars on XBRL and discounts to related conferences and similar events.

We look forward to building on the firm foundation we have established to date and working with you to drive home the transformation of business reporting in 2005. Please join now using the application form on our web site at http://www.xbrl.org.au/application_form/. The membership fees are set according to the level of participation you'd like, and are listed in the form when you select the appropriate option for your business. Please note that individual membership is only for academics.

Yours sincerely
